Kitchen Repair Trustees Update

The drainage system repair project in the Fellowship Hall kitchen is moving forward and should be completed ahead of schedule. A group of Camp Chapel volunteers moved all items out of the kitchen and in storage in the Fellowship Hall on Saturday, June 25. Asbestos abatement was completed in the kitchen on July 6. The drainage system was repaired on July 11. This repair project required the replacement of 40 feet of drainage pipe.

A new floor was installed in the kitchen on July 19 and July 20. The new floor is an epoxy floor with a skid resistant additive. This floor is very similar to the previous kitchen floor.

We are currently planning to move all items back into the kitchen on Saturday, July 30. Please contact a trustee if you would like to volunteer to help move items back into the kitchen.

The kitchen repair project cost approximately $15,000 and could not have been completed in a timely manner without the help of volunteers. The trustees would like to thank every volunteer who generously donated their time, talents, effort and or financial contributions to this project.

A JOB WELL DONE, AND TO GOD BE THE GLORY!

A team of thirteen faithful servants recently participated in the Baltimore County Christian Workcamp by constructing a 43-foot handicap ramp for one of our own fellow congregants, Arleen Parcover. God provided us with the willing spirit, a wonderful shade tree, and three days of good weather (yes, it was very hot!) to complete the task, and it was energy well spent! Because we were blessed with so many helpful hands, we were also able to do some gardening and landscaping for Arleen.

Participants included Kaitlyn and Ryan Bird, Keith and Josh Klemm, Pastor Carol and Dan Pazdersky, Pat and Mike Ryan, Alan Smith-Hicks, Mary Smith, Cheryl Stephens, and Ron and Holly Wolf. Everyone toughed it out through some of the hottest days so far this summer.

The knowledge, skills, and experience of Dan Pazdersky were once again invaluable to the team. He and Mike Ryan worked out the plans, obtained the building materials, and guided the team to completing the project.

A special thanks goes to Dar Pendergrass and Beth and John Olcott who provided brown-bag lunches and beverages for the team.

If this work is of interest to you, stay tuned for our next project in July 2023. All skill levels are welcome. We look forward to what the Holy Spirit has in store for us.

Back to School Community Drive

It's time to unite and bring pride into the hearts of the children in our community going back to school.

April Stevens is leading this effort at Eastern Family Resource Center, through the Community Action Network (CAN). Their goal is to provide each child with brand new items to begin the school year so they can blend in with other children at their school and not look or feel homeless.

Camp Chapel's goal is to provide clothing and school supplies for 10 children. You can choose to donate and purchase the items or make a monetary contribution.

If you prefer to donate, details for the 10 children will be shared. Monetary contributions can be placed in the offering plate or at the church office. Make check payable to Camp Chapel with "Back to School" on the memo line.

Deliver donations and monetary contributions on Sunday, August 7 or 14

so they can be delivered to the shelter by Friday, August 19.

Your contributions will make a huge difference to the life of a child.

Blessings,

Angela Gaskin

Words cannot express my thanks to the CCUM volunteers who with the Baltimore County Christian Workcamp constructed a much-needed ramp to my house now making it easier to avoid any steps getting to my car. The group worked through two very hot days to complete the ramp. I was glad my trees were able to provide some shade during those days. Also, thanks to the tree and bush trimmers and weed diggers that made room for new flowers. Again, thanks to all involved. We have such a dedicated group of volunteers willing to give up their time for others in need.

Here's a God moment that I'd like to share with you.

While working as a nursing instructor, I took a group of nurses to a homeless shelter for veterans called the Settlement House in Cecil County. This was part of their clinical rotation in Nursing Education. Their job was to present a teaching program to the group of men, fix a healthy meal and do an interview project.

As we were in the kitchen getting the meal ready, I noticed that one of my students was outside on the porch with one of the older men. She was crying. My instinct told me to watch them closely but let them have privacy. She came into the kitchen after 30 minutes and I asked her if she was ok. She told me that when we introduced ourselves earlier that evening, one of the men realized that she worked at the same hospital in the city where his sister had worked. He was a recovering alcoholic, estranged from his family. He hadn't seen them in over 10 years, so he wasn't sure if his sister was still working at the hospital.

As they talked, the student realized that his sister was her co-worker and friend! She called her and explained that she was with her brother. She put him on the phone. After lots of tears, he was invited to his sister's home for Christmas dinner.

What a coincidence that a homeless veteran in Cecil County was related to a nurse that worked with my student in Baltimore City – on the same unit!

It was no coincidence...IT WAS A GOD THING!

The Camp Chapel Film Seminar Returns for Its 14th Season

“On a Mission” is the unifying idea for the 2022-2023 Camp Chapel Film Seminar. September marks the beginning of our fourteenth season, and we have chosen some quirky and interesting films to watch and talk about.

Again, this year, our sessions will be presented virtually on the Internet via Zoom. The Zoom sessions have been very successful for several reasons: one, we don’t need to worry about inclement weather, two, attendees don’t need to drive home in the dark when the movie was finished, and three, we can invite people who don’t live near the church.

One significant component of our Bible/film study is that each session stands alone – you can join us for one movie, four movies, or all eight, depending on your interests and your schedule. Each session begins and ends with a discussion of the movie we are about to watch with emphasis placed on how the movie illustrates some aspect of our Christian journey. Our discussion often uses selections from Scripture to connect the film with our faith. We also talk about the movie’s merits as a film and suggest things to look for as we view it. We meet each month on a Saturday evening from 6 pm to about 9 pm. The dates for this season are September 17, October 15, November 19, December 3, February 18, March 18, April 15, and May 13. These are the movies we’re planning to watch:

September: Stardust (2007), starring an ensemble cast featuring Clair Danes, Charlie Cox, Michelle Pfeiffer, Ricky Gervais, Mark Strong, and Robert De Niro. In this fantasy adventure, Tristan Thorne sees a falling star and sets out to catch it to give to his true love, but there are others who covet the star for their own darker purposes.

October: 1917 (2019), starring George MacKay and Dean-Charles Chapman. Set during Operation Alberich in World War I, this film follows two British infantrymen who must race against time across no man’s land to warn the Devonshire Regiment that if they carry out their attack scheduled for the next morning they will be charging right into a German ambush.

November: The African Queen (1951), starring Katharine Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart. In German-held East Africa during World War I, strait-laced missionary Rose Sayer persuades vulgar, gin-soaked steamer captain Charlie Allnut to take her on a journey down the treacherous Ulanga River to sink a German gunboat that is preventing the British from gaining the upper hand in that theater of the war.

December: 3 Godfathers (1948), starring John Wayne, Pedro Armendáriz, and Harry Carey Jr. Three outlaws being pursued by a posse after a failed bank robbery come upon a dying woman in labor and promise her that they will get her baby to safety.

February: A Hologram for the King (2016), starring Tom Hanks, Sarita Chourhury, and Alexander Black. Alan Clay is a failed businessman who is given the opportunity to salvage his career if he can persuade the king of Saudi Arabia to purchase his company's virtual meeting software application, but logistical issues, local Saudi customs, problems at home, and a worrisome lump on his back cause setback after setback.

March: Run, Lola, Run (1998), starring Franka Potente and Moritz Bleibtrau. Lola has just twenty minutes to raise 100,000 deutschmarks or a mob boss will kill her boyfriend Manni.

April: The Gods must Be Crazy (1980), starring N!xau #Toma, Sandra Prinsloo, and Marius Weyers. A remote tribe of hunter-gatherers in the Kalahari Desert find a Coke bottle that has been dropped from a plane and, having never seen anything like it, believe it is a gift from their gods. When the tribe becomes divided over what to do with the gift, Xi, one of the tribesmen, takes it, intending to carry it to the end of the world, where the gods live, so that he can return it.

May: Seeking a Friend for the End of the World (2012), starring Steve Carell and Keira Knightly. The world is about to end and there's nothing anybody can do to stop it. Newly single, Dodge Peterson, accompanied by his downstairs neighbor, Penny, and a dog named Sorry travels to Delaware to see if he can reunite with the love of his life before it's literally too late.

Look for flyers giving more detail about individual films during the season that will be published on our web site and distributed in the Sunday bulletins and the Acorn. We invite you to join us for good movies and inspirational and stimulating discussion. This study is for adults – you must be at least 18.

The Camp Chapel Film Seminar Series Presents:

The Camp Chapel UMC Christian Film Seminar Series presents for viewing and discussion secular movies that have Christian themes. The 2022-2023 season examines movies that are journeys with a purpose.

The fictional town of Wall in Great Britain lies near the border of the magic kingdom of Stormhold. Tristan, a young man of Wall, is hopelessly in love with the beautiful, but fickle, Victoria, but when he is in her presence, he becomes tongue-tied and clumsy. One night, Tristan and Victoria see a falling star, and Tristan vows to find it and give it to Victoria for her birthday in exchange for her hand in marriage. He enters Stormhold to collect the star who, to his surprise, has taken the form of a woman named Yvaine. Three witches and two princes of Stormhold are also hunting for Yvaine, the witches because a fallen star possesses a strong magic, and the princes because she possesses a ruby, and the prince who obtains the ruby will be the next king of Stormhold. Tristan isn't interested in Yvaine's magic or in her ruby, he's just trying to keep her from falling into the hands of the others and getting her back to Wall before Victoria's birthday.

Before and after the film enjoy a lively discussion about it, focusing on gifts of love. We will use selections from Scripture as our jumping-off point.

Stardust (2007), starring Claire Danes, Charlie Cox, Michelle Pfeiffer, Ricky Gervais, Mark Strong, and Robert De Niro, directed by Matthew Vaughn, has a running time of 128 minutes. This film won five international awards, including a Hugo, and was nominated for 11 others.

Hearing Aids? Me?

A few years ago – it was near Christmas – I was having dinner at a nice restaurant with an incredibly good friend, and my friend made this request of me: “For Christmas this year, don’t even send me a card. Instead, please, please, please have your hearing tested. For me.” My friend had been complaining for a long time that I was missing half of any conversation I was part of, and I needed to know that people were getting tired of having to repeat themselves all the time when we conversed. In response, my contention was that everyone I knew spoke unusually softly all the time.

“Okay, okay, okay,” I remember replying eventually, “because you’ve been such a good friend for such a long time, I’ll do it. I’ll get my ears checked, but you’re going to be embarrassed when they tell me my hearing is just fine!”

I got home that evening and retrieved my mail from the mailbox. I was mildly surprised, and maybe a little bothered, to find among the bills and other unwanted advertisements, credit card offers, warnings that my car’s warranty was about to expire, offers of greater internet speed, and “You may already have won a million dollars!” shills, an offer of a free hearing assessment from a local branch of a national chain of audiologists. Was this just a coincidence, or had my friend made some sort of deal with God?

The next morning, I called the number for the free ear test and spoke to a genuinely nice person who told me that the offer had been so well received that the free tests had been completely booked. My heart jumped a little. I had an excuse not to follow up on my friend’s request! I knew that an ear test would be a waste of an hour or so, and I surely did not want to pay for taking one. My reprieve was short-lived, however, because the genuinely nice person on the phone then said that due to the overwhelming response, her office had extended the offer for an additional week and there were still plenty of slots available for me to schedule an appointment. So, with a sigh, I did.

The day came, and I had chivvied myself into looking upon this waste of time as at least an opportunity to say, “I told you so!” to my friend when my results came back showing that my hearing was perfect.

Bits and Pieces

Hearing Aids? Me?

An hour and a half later, I walked out of the audiologist's office wearing my brand-new set of hearing aids. My hearing, according to all the tests Dr. Muzzi had performed, was abysmal. I was able to hear practically none of the sounds in the higher frequencies!

I hadn't been prepared for that. To be honest, I was still just an eensy-teensy bit suspicious that, just maybe, just possibly, I might somehow have been scammed into purchasing an expensive device I didn't really need.

That suspicion only lasted until I started my car. I pressed the electronic starter and the engine caught immediately. Suddenly, I heard chimes! Ka-ding, ka-ding, ka-ding! They were very melodious. Delightful even. But I knew that cars don't go ka-ding, ka-ding, ka-ding because everything is just fine. I scanned my dashboard looking for the icon of the idiot light that would tell me that I needed oil, or I had low pressure in one of my tires, or that I should have my engine checked ASAP, but all that was showing was the seatbelt warning. Being an intelligent guy, it didn't take me too long to deduce that the chime was connected to the glowing little red seatbelt person symbol. Then it hit me. I had had that car for over a year, and even though my usual routine was to close the door, start the engine, and only then to fasten the seatbelt, I was accustomed to seeing the warning light briefly until I was securely belted in, but I had never ever heard that sweet little bell-like tone before! Then I wondered whether my previous two cars, also Mazda 6s, had the same lovely little warning sound and I'd been deaf to it for at least the last decade and a half. What else had I been missing? And how long had I been missing it?

Over the next week before my friend and I were scheduled to have dinner again, I had all sorts of aha! moments. Music sounded better somehow! There were suddenly a lot more birds singing in my neighborhood! I could actually make out what actors were saying when I watched television! At dinner the next time we met, after I ruefully admitted that my friend had been so right and that I had been so wrong, I was effusive with my thanks.

There are all kinds of clever sayings about friends and friendship. “A friend is one who overlooks your broken fence and admires the flowers in your garden.” “A good friend is like a four-leaf clover: hard to find and lucky to have.” “It’s the friends you can call up at four a.m. that matter.” “Friends are the people who know all about you but love you anyway.” And two of my absolute favorites: “A good friend will help you move; a great friend will help you move a body,” and “There’s nothing better than a friend, unless it’s a friend with beer.” These almost, but don’t quite, capture the essence of true friendship.

For me, the element that’s missing from all the aphorisms I quoted above is that a true friend is one who has the courage to risk your friendship to tell you what you need to know, even when you don’t want to know it. It’s not easy to say that “clever,” but for Christians, there are lots of verses in the Bible that confirm this aspect of a genuine friendship. For example, in the book of Proverbs, chapter 27, verse 9, we can read, “...the sweetness of a friend comes from his earnest counsel.” And it’s not a one-way street. The Bible also instructs Christians in several verses how to accept harsh truths from a true friend. Again, from the book of Proverbs, chapter 15, verses 31 and 32, we are told, “The ear that listens to life-giving reproof will dwell among the wise. Whoever ignores instruction despises himself, but he who listens to reproof gains intelligence.” And in Paul’s first letter to the church in Corinth, chapter 13, verse 6, he writes, “Love... rejoices with the truth.”

I can’t honestly say that I rejoiced to learn that I had had a significant hearing loss for I don’t know how many years. I didn’t rejoice when it occurred to me that for that long all of the people who know me had been forced to put up with my constant habit of asking them to repeat something they just said because I didn’t get all of it, either. But I can and I did and I do rejoice in the knowledge that I have friends with the courage to annoy me (and, yes, I was definitely irritated that night and on other occasions) by telling me difficult truths that I didn’t want to own up to at the time. Thank you, ALL my friends.

Bill Smith
